Healthy Eating for Adults

Most American and European adults face obesity and health related problems. With changing lifestyles, adults fail to pay attention to their nutritional needs. We eat either too much or too little. We are malnourished. A majority of us loses that perfect balance of diet and proper eating habits in the competitive world, where our focus is towards greater earnings. This has affected our lives, and filled it with physical stress and mental pressures. It is high time now that we all give healthy eating first priority and spend our time in better living.

Increasing responsibilities requires one to intake more nutritious and healthy food. With so much to do, your body should get all the essential minerals and vitamins, since improper diets lead to weakness, fatigue and stress. Take precautions and have proper meals at the right time, since having very little food will not fulfil the body's needs, leaving you sick and tired. This is a good example and a warning for your kids as you keep telling them repeatedly to eat healthy to keep fit and trim.

Some adults, who simply want to grab a burger, a pizza, or any other junk food to fill their stomachs, and sad to say the kids too learn the wrong eating habits. Junk food may curb the hunger, but it does not take care of your body's nutritional needs. Your body needs proteins, and other essential minerals to stay fit. Junk food takes away all the vitamins and adds extra saturated fats. This leads to obesity, a sure indicator of health related problems. If you are not healthy, what will you do with your wealth? Unhealthy eating makes your body falls prey to health related problems; you cannot enjoy life and would keep feeling stressed and weak.

It is important to spare time to eat, and the time is now. Have small, but healthy meals at regular intervals. Whether you want to lose or gain weight, you must make breakfast the first meal of the day. Starving does not make you lose weight, and your body runs short of required amounts of nutrients. Consult a dietician and plan your daily diet, which you will follow, of course, if you want a healthy life. Proper food intake at proper times will keep you energetic all day long, and you can carry on with your activities without feeling stressed.

When you are well nourished, your brain gets sharp and more alert and you perform well at work and home. You are able to manage life better than before. If they have a proper diet, women do not need to spend on expensive creams and lotions to get the glow on their faces. Keep eating healthy and that glow will stay with you always. Healthy food items revitalize your body systems, helping you lead a healthy and active life. A proper diet and good exercise keeps many diseases at bay. If the body gets, what it requires, the immune system gets stronger fighting all the unhealthy problems. Even if you fall ill by chance, the immune system helps you recover faster.

It is never too late to realize the facts about healthy eating to healthy living. You can start with a proper diet right now and see the difference for yourself. So, the next time you walk in the market do not forget to grab all healthy food for healthy eating.

Healthy Eating During Pregnancy

Pregnancy is the time when a woman's body demands more nutrition than ever. As the development and growth of the fetus depends on what you eat, you have to be careful with your eating habits. If you and your baby are deprived of essential proteins and minerals, there can be fatal incidents in the future. For a pregnant woman, it is very important to stick to doctor's advice and follow the diet that well suits needs of a pregnant woman.

Do not fear weight gain, so do not eat less, but do not overeat either. You can always work out and shed the extra pounds later. Never skip meals, and eat after two-hourly intervals. Take in heavy breakfast that includes cereals, fruits, milk, and any other healthy food item. Eat in moderate but let there be more number of meals. Eat lots of green vegetables, small portion of chicken, fish, beans, cheese, peanut butter, dried fruits, juices, soups, skimmed milk, or other dairy products. Every food that you eat should be rich in vitamins, proteins, and minerals but avoid foods that cause allergic reactions.

If you have been a junk food addict, avoid it completely as it can affect your baby. Eat what your body craves for. Being pregnant does not mean you overeat, but eat as much you feel like. However, make sure there is not much of gap in your meals and snacks, as your body will constantly need nutrition's for baby's growth. Be sensibly when you make a choice in food. Being irresponsible towards your diet can cause your baby problems, and an underdeveloped baby is always difficult to take care of.

When you are pregnant, do not give up exercise. Exercise does not mean you hit the gym and do your cardio or weights. Let there be some light exercises. Go on a walk or follow the exercise that your doctor has asked you to follow. Being stiff and not moving around much can cause you difficulty at the time of delivery and thus it is important to let your body do some physical activity. Always take a walk in fresh air so that you and your baby get fresh oxygen to breathe.

Drink plenty of water and keep your body hydrated. Take liquids in the form of soups or fruit juices or protein shakes. Drink plenty of water, as it flushes out toxins from your body. It is good to enjoy every meal and do not eat anything that causes your baby discomfort. Certain foods can be a problem, so check with your doctor what to eat and what not to. Pregnancy is a very sensitive period, and you need to be cautious enough to make sure you and your baby stay in good health.

Pregnancy is the time when you eat for two and thus you need to be careful with your choice of food. Maintain a healthy diet throughout your pregnancy, and even after the delivery, to recover faster. Eating healthy will ensure good development of baby, which is important for further growth.

Healthy Eating During Exams

Did you know that your diet during your exams could determine your performance and success in the exams? Sources have proven that students eating regular and healthy breakfast accomplish better in exams and studies, as compared to those, who miss the most important meal of the day, breakfast. During their exams, students are physically inactive, but still need lots of vitamins, minerals, and iron to concentrate and remember what they read and learn. Lack of any of these can cause adverse effects on the student's performance in studies and exams.

If you feel tired and lazy to study during your exams, this is an indication of low iron and vitamin B content in the body, and can cause deficiency symptoms like paleness, lack of concentration, feeling giddy, etc. To increase your body's iron and vitamin B, both vegetarian and non-vegetarian foods help. Eat vegetarian food like cereals, baked beans, peas, and spinach, and non-vegetarian food like white meat products. Fish is an important part of the diet because it contains vitamin B, C and E. These vitamins are essential for memory and keep you relaxed. While you have non-veg products, avoid foods that build up body fats.

Many students drink tea or coffee while reading or studying, to keep them awake and alert. Well, wake up to the fact that these do not keep you awake. In fact, excess caffeine in the body builds fats and makes you more lethargic. Drink soups and milk while you study, as they are healthy drinks. Keep tea and coffee to minimum. 1 or 2 cups a day is a good deal.

Small meals at regular intervals is not a bad idea, therefore, it is ideal to have 5-7 small meals a day. This keeps your stomach busy and your brain working. One must never miss on fruits, while in the process of studying. For all the essentials that a body needs, fruits are the ultimate choice. Fruits maintain the sugar level needed by a body through their natural sugar content. Bananas help in increasing weight, oranges helps in building vitamin C, grapes maintain the sugar level, watermelon restrains water-loss from the body and apples provides starch, which indeed gives sugar to the body as natural energy. These are few examples of how important fruits are in a regular diet.

Many people do not drink enough water, while studying, because of ignorance or being engrossed in studies. This is wrong, as you must keep yourself hydrated, while you study. Water, juices and soups at regular intervals during the day are good. It is advisable to take a small walk around your house or compound, to help your body digest food properly and fast. Do not sit down to study immediately after eating as it might make you sleepy and sluggish. If you are a heavy eater, make sure you exercise after eating and then sit to study, in order to refrain from putting on excess weight, and to remain awake during study.

Healthy Eating At Work

With high work pressure and increasing stress levels, most employees barely get time to think about their diet or to follow a health regime. We all know that to survive in this competitive environment, you have to go that extra mile to get noticed at your work place. But that does not mean you have to compromise with your health. There are many ways, you can ensure your calorie and vitamin intake is sufficient for the whole day.

Firstly, it is important to have breakfast, before you leave home. This is the most essential meal of the day, as it provides you with vigour for the whole day. For workingwomen, it is very important to have milk for breakfast, and a combination of milk with oats or low calorie cornflakes is ideal, as it is easy to make and provides you with calcium and the essential nutrients. If you have the time, you can also boil an egg and eat, as it will provide you with enough protein and cut out the carbohydrates.

While you are at work, you are bound to be tempted to have several cups of coffee, but avoid this temptation. A cup of coffee a day does not harm you, but once you start having more than a cup a day, your calorie intake due to sugar and caffeine intake increases body weight much faster.

You may have too much work piled up at office, you may be in a meeting, or you may be just too consumed with work, to realize you have skipped a meal or what you are eating is absolutely unhealthy. The first rule is to choose your food wisely. If you are in a meeting and you have been served working lunch, don't stuff yourself with the cheese pizzas and sandwiches. Instead, go for the salads or pizzas with more green. Instead of Coke, ask for water or a fruit juice.

Make it a point to be one of those people who can eat what they have brought from home, and on time. Make yourself a salad with a few chicken cubes and with low fat salad topping. If you need bread make sure, it's brown. This type of meal is high in fibre and protein and helps you control, even lose weight.

After you get home, you tend to indulge in a snack, and so you tend to eat either fried or sweet food. Keep reminding yourself that you have not indulged in any strenuous physical activity and you can always supplement the snack with fruits or even some refreshing juice and a few biscuits.

Lastly, remember to have an early dinner rich in protein that includes meat and leafy vegetables to give you an ideal diet for the whole day. And most importantly, remember to get at least 45 minutes of exercise, five days a week to keep your body in good shape and stay fit.

Feel Good And Look Young With Healthy Eating

Today's youth spend a hell of a lot on expensive creams and lotions to restore and maintain their beauty. The question is how many are successful in getting the glow on their face? If you do not follow a healthy diet, no cream or lotion will ever help you look young or make you feel good. You look what you eat, and thus, to look younger than your age, and feel fresh and energetic throughout the day, take care of your eating habits.

If you meet any beautiful woman whose age looks the same for years together, make it a point to ask them the secret behind it. Believe me, they will tell you that the way to healthy skin and youthful looks are healthful foods, not any branded creams. To feel good and look young, change your diet. Putting yourself in to a habit of eating healthy is the best solution for all your healthy problems. Consult a dietician for advice on types of food intake you should follow.

Due to their busy schedules, many people complain that they get no time to eat regular meals. However, food should be your first priority especially when you have a busy schedule. Kick-start your day with a heavy and nutritious breakfast so you have enough energy throughout the day. Cereals make a good breakfast. Replace white bread to brown bread and feel the difference. Drink a glass of juice or milk as per your choice.

Add lots of leafy vegetables to your diet. Salads provide you with all necessary vitamins. A fruit after every meal is great and enhances your energy levels. When having meat, make sure you go for lean meat. This keeps a check on your fat levels. Fish is a good source of omega 3 fatty acid, and you should certainly include fish in your diet. Beans, nuts, and eggs are high on proteins that are required for the body development. Do not completely cut down on fats as your body needs some percentage for the growth and development. You can choose low fat food stuff to control the body fats.

A balanced diet makes sure you are high on energy levels, and makes you feel peppy all day long. The results that you get from healthy food items, no other artificial food item can give. Natural food items have all the minerals and essential vitamins that make you feel good and look naturally young. With healthy eating habits, you never have to worry about any side effects or other healthy related problems. Keep yourself away from artificial juices and junk food. When in restaurants, learn to select your dishes properly. It is good to keep your temptation in control and order healthy and nutritious food.

There is no reason to get bored with healthy food items, as you can experiment with your cooking. You can try various dishes and cook in different styles to make it look appetizing. All it takes a great deal to put yourself in the habit of healthy eating, it is worth it in the long run. It is never too late to start eating healthy as it has lots of benefits for all.

Eating Healthy When Dining Out

If you have started eating healthy food at home, then you need to extend it while dining out, since a single high-fat or high-calorie meal can undo your entire week's hard work. A little research and a little care while dining out will result in eating food that not only tastes good, but is also light in calories.

Narrow down restaurants that do not serve greasy or oily food or those that at least offer a healthier version of their regular food. You should inquire if the restaurant is willing to provide grilled or lightly sautéed dishes, instead of just frying them. Restaurants that serve different cuisines such as Italian, Mexican, American, Chinese, and Indian require different approaches.

But, as a general rule of thumb, ensure that your intake of fresh vegetables in the form of salads or other side dishes is quite high. This ensures that you do not wolf down only on meat or pizzas topped with double cheese.

The key to dining out is to savour the fine taste of various dishes. Instead of concentrating on only one item, try to eat smaller servings of various dishes. This will please your palette, while ensuring that you do not concentrate on a single high-calorie dish. Order a salad sprinkled with lime, salt and pepper instead of one doused with mayonnaise. Even while trying sauce-based dishes, eat those that have a tomato base instead of a cream base. Avoid drinking sweetened carbonated sodas, and instead drink tea or coffee sweetened with sugar substitutes, or better still drink fresh fruit juices or water.

Avoid soups that have a lot of cream content and instead stick to clear soup or tomato soup. A soup will dull your appetite and so, you will not eat too much. Try not to finish the entire dish at one go, but instead get some of it packed to re-heat the next day. If at a fast-food restaurant, order a single-patty burger that has only dry salad instead of cheese and mayonnaise. Even pizzas should be thin crust or whole wheat based with less cheese and high vegetable toppings, instead of a thick crust double cheese pizza with red meat topping. In short, substitute any dish that is dripping with molten cheese or butter with one that only has a little cheese or butter spread thinly over it.

By cutting down on high-fat and high-calorie dishes, you will still enjoy your meal without piling on the unwanted calories to your body. Order one dessert and share it with your partner; this is a good way to control your calorie intake.

You can thus keep a watch on the quality of food you eat, when you dine out and a little care and research goes a long way to make your dining experience memorable and filling, without having a negative effect on your health.

Eating Healthy Under Stress

Stress is an unavoidable companion, of nearly every urbanite in this fast paced world. A high stress level may force you into an unhealthy eating cycle, which could further complicate your health. On the other hand, eating healthy food could actually help you to reduce your stress levels and helps you bounce into this high stress arena with aplomb.

Work pressures might lead to building stress levels up, and this results in low energy levels, fatigue and often with a feeling of depression. Pressure of time might force you to eat unhealthy fast food over a longer period. This results in starving your body of vital vitamins, proteins and carbohydrates essential to power your body and mind. So, stop buying your food from fast food pick-ups, and instead substitute it with healthy alternatives that can be prepared in a jiffy. So, instead of picking up donuts, burgers, or pizzas, pick up fruit, and fruit juices without preservatives, or sandwiches made of whole wheat bread or cookies made of whole wheat.

Synthetically prepared fast foods provide only temporary relief by spiking sugar levels. Trans-fat and cholesterol rich food, instead of helping your body and mind, only end up weakening the body's immune system. This cycle will continue until your body or your mind eventually breaks down. But, if you start eating the right foods, you could soon refresh your body and mind and this will enable you keep the stress causing demons at bay.

A healthy breakfast of eggs, grilled bacon, whole wheat bread or cookies with fresh fruit juice or even bananas blended in cold milk does not require a lot of preparation time, yet tastes extremely good. Lunch could consist of pastas or rice noodles with your choice of fresh vegetables, which should not be fried, but lightly sautéed or just boiled. Salads made of various vegetables and fruits are also a healthy option and provide a tasty side dish. If you do not find the time to make a salad, then you could just have a tasty vegetable juice. Sandwiches made of granary bread with a variety of fillings like vegetables, lightly grilled white meat, or egg white also make for a healthy lunch. You can add butter or cheese to your sandwiches, but remember to stay in calorific control.

For those in-between snacks, keep natural canned fruit or whole-wheat crackers or cookies in your office or store. Try to restrict your tea or coffee intake to two cups in a day and replace them with lemon juice or any other vegetable juice of your choice. Make sure to rotate your vegetables, fruits and salads, in order to stay motivated and not get bored within a short time. In order to suppress any untoward cravings, you can eat burgers, chocolates and pizzas occasionally, but ensure that it does not turn into a regular habit, again.

Instead of eating the wrong kind of food that only add to your stress problems, ensure that you follow a healthy food regime that in fact helps you to fight stress and also ensures that you keep stress away in future.

Eating Healthy For A Big Game

With the Big Game around the corner, the first thing a player needs to keep in mind is to stay lean and fit. Regular exercises and a healthy diet keep a player in the best of shape to play that all-important game, but playing the Big Game adds its own level of physical and mental strengths.

There are specific exercises to do and foods that an athlete or player can consume to gain stamina and strength. One of the important parts of gaining muscle is definitely to exercise. Apart from this, regular protein intake is necessary to give the body its required strength and help build muscles. Necessary amount of protein supplements are a quick and easy way to get nourishment, but not recommended.

Protein-rich meals can be consumed everyday, avoiding unnecessary spending on protein supplements. Always remember excess of anything is not good. Few people go a step ahead and take in excess protein, which is only stored as extra energy or fat.

Before your game, eat a low fat meal with enough proteins and carbohydrates and give at least 2 hours for your stomach to digest the food.

When you know your game will last for more than an hour, ensure you consume meals with lots of carbohydrates 2 to 3 days before your game. This ensures that muscles store more carbohydrates, and gives you higher endurance during your long game. An ideal diet break up of calories for sportsmen is, approximately 60% of carbohydrates, 20% protein and 20% fat.

After practicing and sweating, replace your body's depleted salts and minerals. You can do so with your regular meals, limejuice or glucose. Make sure all bodily minerals are replaced, as you don't want to get dehydrated. Ignoring thirst after a long hard game can lead to cramps as well. So make sure all bodily fluids are replenished in due time.

The next question that will arise is what are the ideal sources of vitamins, minerals, proteins, carbohydrates etc. To give you a brief description of each source of nutrients:

- For the right amount of vitamins and minerals, each meal should contain bright coloured vegetables like carrots, spinach, and pepper.
- To get an adequate amount of calcium, milk and all dairy products are the best option.
- For iron, you should eat chicken, tuna, and leafy green vegetables.
- For a good amount of protein, go for fish, chicken, soy products, and nuts.
- Fibrous food such as wheat or pasta is rich in carbohydrates. Sportsmen should eat this to acquire adequate amount of energy to be stored in the muscles.
- Lastly, to replenish your body of all vitamins and salts lost due to sweating, water is the best option. The ideal amount would be 1 cup of water, after every twenty to thirty minutes of exercise.

While a few sportsmen maintain a balanced diet, some concentrate on burning calories and losing weight, so, when you need to excel, ensure that you get the right amounts of all nutrients to excel.

Eating Healthy For A Better Heart

Records of medical related deaths in the last few decades show that the most number related to cardiac arrests, and heart related problems. Being a crucial part of the body, and you should take care to keep your heart healthy. People go usually for taste and not for quality of food. They overlook foods that give them energy nutrients, and opt for foods that give taste, and kill hunger. Almost everyone eats at fast food joints that serve junk, but which tastes yummy. Have you ever realized how much damage burgers, fries, sausages, and other fast food causes to the heart? Consumption of excess salt and sugar is also considered unhealthy for the heart.

Yes, it is very difficult to keep away from those tempting delicious hamburgers and juicy sausages. However, make sure you keep away from them or get prepared to face a round of heart stopping trouble. The only alternative to a hamburger is no hamburger, but if you must, ensure that they contain very little mayonnaise, and the sausages stir fried in low amounts of refined oil. Studies show that about 80% of heart diseases can be reduced through healthy and proper diet. Well, if you are one of those people that eating fattening foods and have oodles of excess weight, it's high time you control your diet and follow the following tips.

Vegetarian foods: There is nothing as healthy as pure vegetarian food. It is not that vegetarian foods don't contain fats. They do, but less. Green leafy vegetables, carrots, tomatoes, cucumbers are considered very healthy and adds no cholesterol to your body.

Non-vegetarian foods: There are a few methods to cook non-veg foods to reduce the cardiac risk. Add spice to your non-veg foods by mixing sage, dill, dry mustard, marjoram, tarragon, oregano, garlic, onions etc., as these reduce cholesterol and fat saturation.

Extra activities: Smoking, alcohol, excess caffeine in the body can also add to the risk of heart diseases. In order to keep your heart healthy, reduce or eliminate these from your life, and be involved in regular physical exercises that include cycling, running, jogging, cross training, etc. All this, not only makes your cardio-vascular system strong, but also builds your stamina.

Here's a list of both vegetarian and non- vegetarian foods that can help you remain fit and keep your heart healthy: White meat, lean red meat, wholegrain foods, green/red fruits and vegetables, low fat milk and milk products, and low cholesterol oil or olive oil.

Eat low saturated fat foods and carefully read the ingredients used in your food and do not trust the labels saying low cholesterol. Chocolates, fast/junk foods, mayonnaise, cheese, butter, etc should be avoided as much as possible. Remember; avoid Low-Density Lipoprotein (LDL), which is bad cholesterol, as it causes heart complexities; whereas High-Density Lipoprotein (HDL) is the good cholesterol, which should be present in the body to prevent cardio vascular risks. Things like heredity, gender and age cannot be controlled, but things that affect them can surely be. Hence, eating healthy food and keeping a watch over your diet would better keep your heart safe.

Eating Healthy During Traveling

While travelling by road, rail, air or sea, you might find that your choice of eating healthy food is severely curtailed. The main reason is that most joints that dish out food to travellers concentrate more on their turnover of food rather than ensuring that the dish has the right calories and nutrition. So, it depends on you to locate and choose the dish that not only satisfies your taste buds, but also provides the right fuel for your body.

The basic problem in eating healthy food during travelling is that you might tend to lose control over food, which may be due to eating home-made food for a long time or if you lay your eyes on some local delicacies along the way. If you cannot resist the temptation of trying out various delicacies along the way, then at least try to limit the quantity by sharing the dish with your loved ones. In addition, try to have items with less calories and more nutritional value, and are light on the stomach. If you are travelling by road and need to have your breakfast at a small service station, then do not order fried bacon or deep fried eggs in any form. Instead, order for a sandwich or cereals with hot or cold milk. In case you order eggs ensure that you stick to boiled eggs or an omelette with lightly buttered toast.

Ensure that you and your children eat nutritious snacks along the way. Instead of eating French fries or chips that have high salt and fat levels, pack whole wheat bread with peanut butter or cheese slices and protein bars along with fresh fruits or fruit juices. Avoid coffee and tea. Assorted nuts such as walnuts and cashews make for good in-between snacks. These food items will keep your children busy and will also save a lot of money along the way. Check the road map and try to locate any other restaurants along the way, where you can get access to healthy food. Ensure that you choose the right salads and fillings, since not all the ingredients are low in calories.

Even if you are travelling by train, plane, or ship, try to do a mental calculation of the calories and check out the positive and negative aspects of any dish, before ordering it. Try sticking to baked, boiled or roasted dishes instead of fried ones. If you are having lunch along the way, then go in for a light soup followed by dishes containing white meat instead of red meat. Ensure that you have adequate side dishes containing vegetables or salads to complement your meat dish.

The key to eating healthy during travelling is to avoid the temptation of stuffing yourself along the way. You should eat food that keeps you alert and thus enables you to enjoy your travel, instead of making you sluggish. By keeping an eye out for healthy food and sticking to your resolution of eating only sensible food, you can enjoy your journey, while remaining healthy at the same time.

Eating Healthy After A Hangover

If you have had a night filled with fun, dance, and lots of drinks, then you could wake up with a pounding head and a mouth that might have suddenly turned to coarse sand paper. Alcohol can rob the body of vital nutrients including sugar and so it is vital to get the right ingredients back into your body to not only limit the effects of your overnight hangover, but also get back in physical and mental shape, if you want to enjoy the day after.

In order to limit the effects of a hangover, drink lots of water between your drinks, even if it reduces the buzz. This will definitely reduce the hangover by flushing out the alcohol from your system. You need to realize that your body is severely dehydrated due to excessive alcohol and in case you start your morning by drinking coffee or any other products containing caffeine, you could only make the situation go from bad to ugly. In addition to sugar, alcohol also drains away your magnesium and potassium levels. A healthy breakfast is what can actually get you back on your wobbly feet in no time.

Even though you might not feel hungry during a hangover, it is important to eat a full breakfast, since even though your mind might not be willing, your body actually needs the vital vitamins, salt and sugar to start functioning again. Traditional breakfast items like baked beans, bacon, and eggs in various forms can help out a lot. You can also replenish lost vitamins by slowly sipping a glass of orange juice. The important point is to eat slowly, since a heavy breakfast after a heavy night can result in your stomach revolting and throwing everything out, thus resulting in even more hangover problems. Instead of frying everything, try to grill it, so that your breakfast remains healthy and the chances of throwing up gets reduced.

You could also eat bananas to recover the lost potassium levels or if you can arrange for some natural coconut water, then that could be even better since it has more potassium levels than bananas. Do not try to eat or drink anything new, but instead stick to foods that your body is already adapted to, if you do not want any complications. Also, ensure that you drink adequate water and juice throughout the day. If the prospect of a heavy breakfast is unappealing, then try to have a banana smoothie along with some pieces of toast made of whole wheat bread. This could be light on your stomach and you could have another heavy breakfast of bacon, beans or eggs after a couple of hours.

It is better to ignore advice to drink wine or any other alcoholic drink as a cure, since even though it might offer temporary relief by keeping you in a state of suspended high, ultimately your body will pay a higher price, since it will only result in increased dehydration. You will only end up delaying your hangover, instead of eliminating it. Try to stay away from tea and coffee, since caffeine again will only give you temporary mental relief, but will actually dehydrate your body further. A shower will also help you to get fresh.

A little bit of care before, during and after an enjoyable drinking night can thus negate most of the harmful effects of a hangover. Eating and drinking the above-mentioned foods, fruits and drinks is thus a healthy and quick way to bounce back on your feet and can also help to clear your mind to face the coming day.

Does Hypnosis Therapy Really Help For Healthy Eating

People have tried various ways and chalked out diets in their bid to lose weight and eat healthy food. While exercises do help largely, healthy eating habits are equally important, since you will not lose any calories, if you eat four donuts or a slab of chocolate after every workout. The biggest hurdle to develop healthy eating habits is will power, since many people are not able to hold on to their scheduled diet for a long time.

Since will power is just convincing your mind to stick to a particular diet, hypnosis or hypnotherapy is just a method of re-directing or re-programming your mind to veer towards eating healthy food, while reducing the craving for sugar-rich and fried foods. Even as diet programs, diet pills or diet drinks might try to address your problem at a superficial level, hypnosis therapy can root out the problem by eliminating the desire for unhealthy high-fat foods.

Hypnosis therapy tries to reach into the unconscious or subconscious area of the brain, where all these cravings are embedded and tries to either eliminate or re-direct those feelings, towards eating healthy foods. The problem is that your subconscious mind could be accustomed to eating unhealthy foods since childhood and as different people have different reasons for eating unhealthy foods, it is important to recognize the correct reason for the lack of motivation, before it can be treated. If you are not eating healthy food due to any specific reason, such as due to depression or if you see eating high-calorie foods as a reward for any successful action, then your therapist can hypnotize you and find out the actual reason. Hypnosis therapy can thus directly communicate with your subconscious level of your brain to find the actual reasons for the failure to stick to a particular diet or the reasons behind the addiction to any particular unhealthy food group.

Once the therapist configures the real reason for your eating problems, the next step is to re-configure the brain to hone in on healthy foods and proper eating habits, and even feel content, while eating smaller portions of food. The results might not be visible instantly, but instead it could be visible over a period of increasing sessions with the therapist. However, it is still better than popping slimming pills or drinks over a period of years without achieving any consistent results. Until you have a long-term motivation to remain healthy, the short-term objectives will only result in a yo-yo effect on your health. Hypnosis therapy can thus overcome the will power problem and empower your brain towards a new and healthy lifestyle. However, not all people can be successfully hypnotized and your therapist would be in a better position to predict the success ratings for your particular case.

Hypnosis therapy can thus get into the subconscious area of your mind and in addition to removing the craving for unhealthy foods in unhealthy quantities, can also encourage your mind to crave for healthy foods and a healthy lifestyle. Hypnosis therapy can thus eliminate your eating problems from the root and plant a new sapling that encourages you to stick to healthy eating.

Dark Chocolate Is Healthy Eating - Miracle Or A Myth

Dark chocolate at one time was put in the corner shelves, since it was only considered a delicacy for an elite few. However, increasing studies show the health giving benefits of dark chocolate. The fact that most of the health benefits of dark chocolate have been supported by various studies done not only by major chocolate manufacturers, but also independently indicate that there is some truth that dark chocolate is indeed good for health. There are various health benefits from eating dark chocolate.

The key ingredient that makes all the difference in dark chocolate is the high level of cocoa that remains in it after processing. The problem is that most manufacturers remove most of the cocoa during the manufacturing process and replace it with milk solids, sugar, and other additives. The heating process too negates the positive effects of cocoa to a great extent. Dark chocolate can taste bittersweet, but the positive effects of this cocoa laden delicacy could be sweet music to your ears.

One of its miracle properties is the ability to reduce blood pressure. Studies by German doctors among various others have shown that dark chocolate contains cocoa polyphenols, which is responsible for reducing blood pressure without changing one's body weight. Even though the reduction may not be too drastic, eating dark chocolate is one tasty way of reducing blood pressure. Dark chocolate has also shown to improve the function of the heart by relaxing arteries and also improving their response. The antioxidants present in dark chocolates also prevent free radicals from harming the heart by causing heart diseases. There are various levels of cocoa present in dark chocolate and if possible, you should choose the one with the maximum cocoa content, since it has higher benefits as compared to chocolate with lower levels of cocoa. The downside is that cocoa in its unsweetened form is quite bitter, and hence you will need to balance out between taste and benefits.

Dark chocolate can also reduce the levels of bad cholesterol [LDL]. It can also help in reducing weight, since cocoa is known to reduce appetite and its intake can result in an increase in energy. Dark chocolate also contains fiber, which helps the digestion system to digest food in an efficient manner. Dark chocolate also contains magnesium, which in addition helps to reduce blood pressure, also helps to reduce diabetes, stroke and osteoporosis. The cocoa in dark chocolate can also act as mood enhancers by increasing the brain's dopamine activity.

There is however, one fact that should not be ignored before you start munching down dark chocolate. Dark chocolate contains high calories that can pile on extra flab on to your body. Hence, as in everything else in life, moderation is the key word.

Although, dark chocolate does have many health benefits and should definitely be a part of your lifestyle, it is important to remember that a healthy balance is required to balance out the high calories in dark chocolate by eating other healthy foods, in order to maintain a healthy calorie intake. Thus, dark chocolate is indeed a bittersweet miracle that if taken wisely can truly benefit your body and mind.

Benefits Of Healthy Eating

Many people who have ignored bad eating habits have regretted in the older years. Healthy food keeps away many diseases and ill effects and you live a life that is free of tension and problems. Apart from enjoying life, you develop positive feelings. Therefore, healthy food keeps both mind and body fit for life long.

Thus, it is never too late to begin to eat healthy food and so live a healthy life. You will never run into bad effects because of good eating habits. So it is always better to eat well and stay in good shape. You can keep obesity and other harmful health problems far away from you.

Beat Obesity With Healthy Eating

Seeing obese persons has now become a common feature. Every other person is overweight, if not obese. Besides making a person look ungainly, obesity affects a person adversely, posing severe health hazards. There are various reasons for obesity; however, there are no advantages to being obese, only disadvantages.

If you are obese and you want to lose that extra body fat, a perfect diet is essential. A diet that is chalked out considering your age, gender, fat percentage and body weight would be a perfect diet. Visit a dietician, who is an expert in this field and share with him/her your eating habits and lifestyle. Here are a few tips on how you can start with a fat-loss program, which you could follow yourself.

Diet: Make a list of dishes that you eat throughout the day for a week. After that, make a note of fatty food that you consume. Consult a dietician to know what contains fat and what is nutritious. Eliminate those items from your list that generate unnecessary fats in your body. If those items are your favorites, reduce their consumption to start with. If you are one of those, who overeat, then you need to have plenty of water just before you start your meal and if you feel hungry after every 2 hours, then try having salads or fruits, and not bananas. There is nothing better than a fruit and vegetable diet. Some of the best foods are boiled vegetables, fruit salads, vegetable salads, etc., which supply vitamins and minerals for the body and make you fit.

Breakfast being your first meal of the day should be at about 7 am and must be heavy and nutritious. Lunch should be a little light at about 1 pm and your dinner has to be bare minimum by 7pm. Eating healthy meals on time is necessary for fat loss. Always follow the saying, “eat your breakfast alone, share your lunch with friends and give your dinner to your enemy”.

Exercise: Exercise to lose extra body fats. Your work out should mainly consist of cardio vascular exercises, such as running, jogging, cycling, skipping, etc. Fat loss is the result of balanced combination of diet and exercise. Do not make the mistake of exercising vigorously, initially. Many people get carried away with the whole weight loss spree and end up with severe body pain and miss out on further exercises. If you are used to exercising, you can very well go ahead with your work out and gradually increase exercising more.

Here is a tip on how to increase your metabolism rate and lose fats faster. Work out for the biggest muscle of your body, your legs. Consisting of quadriceps, hamstrings and calves, your legs have to be strong and not fat, as they carry your entire weight.

Other things: Reduce alcohol, aerated drinks, sweets, chocolates, oily foods, and other fattening edibles drastically. They contribute a lot to obesity. Overeating and continuous eating also adds to obesity. Obesity is one of the causes for cardiac arrests in many people. Therefore eat healthy, exercise well and beat obesity.

Why Should You Eat Healthy

Survival of the fittest is the one single principle that rules the animal world. This rule does not govern humanity, however, and as a result, man has relegated health to the bottom of his priority list. It is only when nature provides a shocking reminder of neglect through a stroke or a heart attack that most people realize that they should have followed a healthy routine.

There are a few simple steps to follow to be in good health. Regular exercise and intake of the right foods to keep your body fit, and develop a strong immune system to fight the onslaught of various diseases. Eat the correct proportion of fats, proteins and carbohydrates to provide the vitamins, minerals and other elements needed by the body to survive, and flourish. Carbohydrates rich foods have a combination of fibre, sugar and starch, and thus supply the body with glucose that provide the energy to complete physical tasks. Proteins too are vital in providing energy to the body, but you need to watch out for foods that have healthy and unhealthy levels of fat along with protein.

The right combination of fresh vegetables, fruits, dairy and meat products can fulfil your body's needs. This means that you can perform all the physical tasks while your brain too remains healthy and active. A fit body and mind not only ensures a long and healthy life, but also keeps all major and minor diseases at bay. A healthy mind and body can delay any age related disease, such as Alzheimer's or osteoporosis thus improving the quality of life.

Promote healthy eating habits among your loved ones and your children. The right foods help you increase your efficiency while exercising and during work. A healthy mind keeps stress at bay, and this results in a general sense of well-being, and contentment.

On the other hand, eating unhealthy food over a long period can lead to fat accumulating in various parts of your body including your arteries. While body fat is easily visible, fat accumulating inside your body is not visible and unfortunately is irreversible. Thus, you might have to go in for a heart bypass operation to replace clogged arteries, if you ignore your health for a long time. The key is to embark on healthy eating habits from childhood itself. For girls and women too, healthy eating habits can result in flawless skin and a fit body. The right combination of a heavy breakfast, medium lunch, and a light dinner can help the body to digest in a more efficient way.

As the old saying goes, 'prevention is better than cure' and by embarking on a mission to eat healthy foods, you can ensure that you live a long and healthy life. A healthy diet enables you to perform all physical and mental functions, while ensuring that you live a better quality of life, free from any ailments.

The Secrets to Eating Healthy

Today people do not spare even a single thought to understand the importance of healthy eating. The intake of junk foods has increased to such an extent that obesity and all other ill effects are taking a heavy toll on the body. We all envy a perfect body and a fresh looking face. We have secret desires to maintain our physiques, but the stresses and strains of our daily lives have had a negative impact on our bodies. Moreover, the only remedy to this is to find the balance to eating healthy food. By sparing a few minutes to choose healthy food, you make your life fit and healthful.

Never leave your home without a wholesome breakfast. Always keep some time in your schedule for eating. If you want to look great, you know you need to eat well. Do not forget to eat the correct mix of salads, green vegetables, and fruits. If you eat fruits after meals, your body will be high on energy and remove all the toxins from your body. If you are tending to obesity, avoid eating foodstuff containing saturated fats. These food items will simply add to your body fat.

Eating healthy includes staying away from too much alcohol, drugs, and other health denying habits. They only destroy your body cells and make you look pale and unsightly. Instead get into the habit of drinking fruit juices daily. A daily glass of milk can do wonders for your body. Avoid eating meat daily, and it is good eat vegetable dish everyday. Your body needs a wholesome diet and depriving it would make you weak and sick.

If you have been complaining of stress and bodily pain off and on, blame it on your diet and eating habits. A healthy diet will keep you off the stress and make you look great even at the end of a hectic day. Proper meals throughout the day provide all the ingredients to the body to stay fit and lively all day long. You need not visit a salon to get a glow on your face through artificial applications. Healthy food diet takes care of your health and beauty and gives you a natural shine on your face. The skin looks clear and clean making you feel confident, and saves you from buying costly creams and other skin products.

Always carry some healthy snacks, when travelling. This prevents you from staying hungry. A bottle of juice or fruits should be a part of your handbag. No one should have 'no time to eat', as this is the most lame of excuses. Just as you have time for work, so should you have time to eat, all it requires is to set aside an eating schedule, and stick to it. Eating should be your first priority. When in a restaurant, make sure you order something that is healthy and strengthening. Do not overeat; it won't do you any good. Do not eat, if you are not hungry. Do not keep changing your eating hours or your body will suffer from constant changes. If you have been on a junk food diet, it is still not too late to start with healthy eating to spend some more healthy years.

Stimulating Your Love Life with Healthy Eating

Did you ever sit back and think why is your sex life not so healthy? There could be many reasons. However, did you know that unhealthy eating habits also could be one of the reasons? If you want to have a real healthy and ongoing love/sex life, eating healthy and good food can help you. You want your love life to be strong, regardless of your age, so to make this happen, it is essential that you eat the right kind of food and exercise regularly. This will improve your vigor and stamina.

It is a wrong notion people have that only non-vegetarian food provides lot of strength and not vegetarian food. Well, vegetarian food is also essential to keep your body fit as non-vegetarian food, and can replace non-vegetarian food without any nutritional imbalances in your body. A study has revealed that tomatoes are good for men as it increases their sperm counts. Chocolates are good foods for females to increase their sex drive. Many foods can improve and maintain a healthy love life, and liver is one such. Some people hate onions because their breath smells. One good way is to reschedule when you eat them, since onions are a great food to improve their sex life. Onions are proven the best sex arousal foods for both men and women. There are always alternatives to get rid of foul breath, like brushing teeth before going to bed, using mouthwash and chewing on gums. Some people do not eat seafood, but they do not know how seafood especially oysters, which can help them have a fit love life especially have a weak sex life.

The most essential part about healthy eating and having a happy sex life is eating the right kind of food and at the right time. A good breakfast, a healthy lunch, and a light dinner should be a diet program for a normal, fit person. Fruits are another important additions that determine your health. Avoid eating too many bananas, especially if you are a person slightly on the heavier side. Whereas other fruits such as oranges, apples, and watermelon is very health giving. Do not forget to eat carrots and cucumbers. Avoid too much caffeine and alcoholic drinks, as these build fat in your body and decrease your stamina, thus affecting your love life. Studies show that men and women with low stamina cannot enjoy a healthy sex life. In some countries, people consume a glass of milk before they make love. This helps them get a good arousal and orgasm as well.

No matter what age group you belong to, make sure you consult your doctor, if any of the above-recommended food products cause you indigestion or uneasiness. Make sure you eat the right food at the right time. Follow these tips and have a happy love life.

Recipes For Healthy Eating

Is the food you eat healthy? Does it contain all the proteins, minerals and vitamins essentials? If you don't already know, it's high time you realize what exactly are you consuming. The three meals of the day have to be healthy and on time; if possible stretch them to five or six smaller meals. If you are working in an office or are a salesperson, you will tend to order some fast food, as and when you are hungry. This is a very unhealthy idea. Make an effort, and cook something healthy. If you don't know how to cook or have any recipes, you can always search online. Many sites give you detailed recipes for vegetarian and non-vegetarian cooking.

Salads with fruits and vegetables are a very healthy meal for all ages. It provides you with a lot of energy and keeps you fit. A lot of doctors and dieticians recommend salad meal at least once in a day. If you get bored eating the same salad everyday, add new flavors, and bring in a greater variety and try different methods of preparing salads. Grilled, baked, and steamed food is always advisable.

Many people do not eat healthy because most of them cannot give up the foods they like, which is fattening, but tasty. You can always add non-vegetarian items like boiled chicken, grilled pieces of steak, egg white and grilled bacon. This is mainly for people, who do not want to give up on steak and bacon easily. You can always search online for healthy recipes of foods that contain your favorite steak, bacon, ham, etc. Avoid eating fat content foods like egg yolk, bread, rice, sugar and sweets. Try brown and whole wheat bread and brown rice and brown sugar instead. There is always a healthy alternative for your taste of food. In your recipes, always use ingredients that are sugar free, cholesterol free and fat free. This helps you remain fit and reduces risks to your cardio vascular system.

Know simple facts like:

- Avoid using too much oil
- Do not overeat
- Use right ingredients
- White, and lean meats are better than fatty red meat
- Dairy based products are fattening
- Avoid deep fried foods

- Processed food is not all that great, though it might taste good
- Junk food is filling but not healthy.
- Olive oil is the best cooking medium, if at all you want to deep-fry something.
- Instead of frying, stir-fry your vegetables.

Find time to search for food facts, what alternatives you can have etc. Learn ways to make meals with less fattening and yet healthy and tasty. Remember it's not only for you, but your family as well.

Your recipe should never contain a lot of non-vegetarian food, especially if you are serving dinner because non-vegetarian food takes a bit longer to digest. Fruits and vegetables in all your food are healthy. If you have decided to cook and eat healthy food, check the difference in your weight, skin, freshness and concentration just in a few weeks.

Healthy Eating Plan For A Diabetic

A diabetic has to be very careful of the foods consumed, as it is a malfunction, where a body loses its control over producing insulin, and the glucose level in the body fluctuates. A diabetic's diet plan is different from, the normal, because many essential foods contain sugar and these foods need elimination from a diabetic's list. So, if you are diabetic, refer to a registered dietician or food counsellor.

Diet plan: Plan your diet. Write down all the food you like and eat. Segregate those with sugar content. With this process, you know what exactly you can consume, and at what rate. Your diet plan must include proper food, and meal timings. Take the help of your doctor or dietician to prepare this plan. Check your blood pressure, blood sugar levels, weight, etc., before you draw your diet plan. From the total calories consumed in a day, an average diabetic should target about 55% of carbohydrates, around 15% of proteins and 30% of fats.

Eating plan: Your list should include edibles like spinach, bitter gourd, beets etc., as they are supposed to be low in glucose content. Fruits like gooseberry, blackberry, and oranges provide less glucose and more of vitamins. It is advised to eat often, but little and recommended food only. This is because diabetics, when very hungry, can faint. Eat a lot of green leafy vegetables and use fat free food products. Reduce the consumption of alcohol, as it adds sugar to your body. If your sugar level fluctuates, have food that contains adequate amount of carbohydrates.

Here are some tips on how you can manage to reduce the level of sugar content in your body, if you are a diabetic.

- A glass of bitter gourd juice every morning can help you balance your sugar level. If you hate the taste of it, have a glass of orange juice right after that to change the taste of your mouth.
- Eat spinach, and tomatoes with your food.

- A glass of blackberry seed juice is considered a medicine for diabetics in many countries.
- Fenugreek seed juice is again good for diabetics.

If you carefully look, all the above-mentioned food items are bitter in taste or have no sugar content. Consult your doctor or health counsellor before you try any of the above-mentioned tips, as it might differ from person to person.

If you have a high level of sugar in your body, completely stop consuming sugar and sweets, and control the level of oil in your food. Many people adhere to junk, oily, spicy and fattening food, while in the process of controlling their sugar levels. They reduce the level of sugar but end up with heart problems. Therefore, it is very necessary to keep a check on your weight and blood pressure along with your sugar level. Eat healthy and reduce the risk, if not eliminate diabetes from your body.

Healthy Eating On A Budget

With food and fuel prices going through the roof, the world over, it has become very important to restrict even necessary expenses, and go on a budget. While it is essential to remain healthy, you can remain healthy on a budget.

It is not difficult, when you know how. First, calculate the average monthly food expenses. Include everything from day-to-day expenses for vegetables, fruits, meat and dairy products, and the money spent on going to restaurants and pubs, etc. Once you have the average figure of the past few months, it becomes a bit easier to plan your monthly budget. Since health is a priority, eliminate all the trips made to the local donut shop. You can still visit the donut shop, but restrict it to twice or three times a month. Substitute your donut break with fresh fruits or fruit or vegetable juices. If you need to eat something crunchy, then eat a whole-wheat cracker or a couple of biscuits with a vegetable salad, and the health benefits show up almost immediately.

The main savings come during your trip to the supermarket. Check local newspapers or magazines for special offers and use food coupons, wherever possible. Buy your vegetables and fruits in larger quantities, and if possible in bags, instead of buying it on a per-piece basis. It works out to be cheaper. Trimmed and cut vegetables are also costlier, so avoid buying them. Most of the supermarkets have special schemes for juices and other canned items. Buy the ones that do not have preservatives or artificial colors and stick to the 100% natural ones instead. While buying meat products, avoid buying the boneless variety, since it is costlier. You can also remove the fat yourself from beef, instead of buying the costlier low fat variety. Avoid red meat as much as possible and stick to white meat like chicken. It is light on your wallet and your heart too. Eat more vegetables with pasta, spaghetti, rice, etc., instead of eating too much meat. Include potato, onions, garlic, ginger, and mint in your diet. These are not only comparatively cheap, but also strengthen your immune system. When cooked with vegetables, they convert the dish into a tasty masterpiece.

Change your breakfast menu, and in case you eat high fat and high calorie items, such as fried bacon, eggs, and white bread smothered in butter. Replace these items with oatmeal, whole meal bread, egg whites, and whole-wheat muffins. You can also make a smoothie by mixing bananas or strawberries in cold milk. It is inexpensive, yet filling. In case you want to eat bacon and egg, restrict yourself to eating it once or twice a week and grill it instead of frying it. Your dinner should also be light, yet filling. Try to make pizzas and burgers at home. They will turn out to be healthier and much cheaper compared to restaurants. Instead of visiting pubs regularly, call a few friends over and enjoy your drinks with wholesome homemade food.

So, instead of just complaining about high fuel and food prices over which you have no control, use it as an excuse to change to healthier eating habits. Combine healthy eating with an exercise regimen to save money and to lead a long and healthy life.

Healthy Eating For Weight Gain

A lot is written about weight loss and a slimmer body. However, some are underweight, and constantly look for ways to gain weight. To stay healthy, one needs the perfect weight. Being underweight is equally bad for your body. If you have tried to gain weight and failed every attempt, the reason may be that either you are following a wrong path or you are just not following the method.

Your body weight depends on what you eat. Eating unhealthy stuff can lead to weight loss and make you look pale and sick. When the body is deprived of proper meals, it will start eating the cells within the body making you lose your body mass. Do you know that every time your body makes any movements, it loses calories? There are many people, who have a busy and hectic life, but simply fail to eat and neglect to eat what the body requires. Eating healthy meals and at proper time will help you gain the perfect body shape that you have been wishing for.

If you fall in the category of underweight persons, firstly, alter your diet and include foods that are more nutritious. Have small meals, but take it at least 4 to 5 times a day. Apart from altering your diet, you need to change your eating habits as well. You can't keep eating as you wish. You should understand your body clock and work accordingly. Long gaps between meals are as good as starving, and destroy your cells. Plan out a schedule to eat and follow it accordingly. Frequent changes affect the body adversely and make you lose more energy and body mass.

Begin your day with a glass of milk and cereals, and then eat fruits. Prepare a few vegetable sandwiches with butter or cheese. Remember to take your breakfast, soon after you wake up. There should also be less time gap between your breakfast and lunch. If for any reason it takes time, grab a fruit or a healthy drink or a nutritious bar to munch. It is good to make salads as part of your meals. A large portion of chicken or fish is healthy and helps you gain weight as well. It is a good idea to include some green leafy vegetables in your meals. Do take a snack break in the evening and pamper yourself with some protein drink and healthy sandwiches or salad.

If at any time you happen to do some heavy activities, remember your body has burnt lots of calories and thus you need to recharge by eating something healthy. Include a lot of liquids in your diet as well, so that the body keeps getting the required amount of liquid to flush out the unwanted toxins and keep your stomach clean. Combining healthy eating with exercise will do wonders for your body. A good diet will not only help you gain weight, but also make you look great. When your energy levels are high, you feel fresh throughout the day and can undertake any task with ease.

A healthy body and mind can do lots of good. Eat right and stay fit and you will enjoy life like never before. If you have a balanced diet, you need not consume weight gain powders or tablets. A proper diet should work perfectly on your body. Nothing is as great as eating good, wholesome food.

Healthy Eating For Teenagers

Growing children need plenty of energy to perform their daily activities. An average teenager is involved in high intensity activities compared to an office goer. Activities can be low, medium, and high intensity. Study, play, exams, camps, trips, big games, tours, etc., are some of the many activities that form part of a teenager's life through the day. He/she needs both, mental and physical strength up with this routine, to remain fit and healthy.

A teenager's diet should contain carbohydrates, proteins, minerals, vitamins, and all the essentials that their bodies need. A teenager should have more food as compared to a 45 year old. This is because teenagers have high metabolism rates. Five or six medium meals justify an average teenager's diet pattern. A little bit of fatty food is again not a problem because the fats in the body disappear the moment they start engaging themselves in different games, trips or any other activities. In fact, teenagers should eat heavy meals, as this is their only time to build strong bodies.

The essential and healthy food items for a teenager are:

Milk- provides calcium for healthy teeth and bones. Water content in the milk keeps you hydrated.

Fruit juices- gives the teenager that little boost in stamina required while they play.

Water- an average teenager must consume at least 8-10 liters of water per day.

Meat and eggs- provides proteins, vitamins and carbohydrates. Very essential to increase weight and muscle mass. Fish helps in increasing concentration and alertness.

Fruits and vegetables- are more essential than non-vegetarian food. It is important because the minerals and vitamins are needed for the body and keeps the body hydrated. Fruits also help in learning and remembering. Dieticians recommend plenty of fruits and vegetables for growing teens. Fruits and vegetables are great to gain weight and remain fit.

All the above food items help teens in their studies and physical activities. The food cycle of an average teenager should be heavy breakfast at about seven, a fruit around 10, good lunch at about one, a fruit at about 3, and a small meal at around 5 with a fruit juice and dinner at 8. A growing teen must not eat oily or fattening foods, as this might make him/her lazy, lethargic or even build excess body fats, which are the initial stages of obesity.

If your teenager is not engaged in sports or exercises, absolutely do not follow the above-mentioned foods, since with healthy eating; there should always be good exercise. Teens with low metabolism rate often put on more weight, even if they eat less. This is not correct. The idea is to eat healthy and exercise more to increase the metabolism rate and reduce the unwanted fats in the body.

Teens that are always attached to the computer or are at home should reduce the intake of meat, energy drinks, and milk, as it is not necessary for them and they might put on fats in their bodies. To conclude, teens should stop eating junk food from outside and stick to home cooked food to stay healthy and fit.

Healthy Eating For People Over Sixty

Generally, people in over sixty have altered food tastes. Foods do not taste the same. They lose appetite and even their favourite foods do not fascinate them anymore. They tend to put on weight even if they barely eat. Metabolism rates decrease with age and people tend to put on fats. Increasing weight in sixties is a bad sign, as it can cause many health related hazards. A person in his/her sixties must follow a proper diet plan. Here are some tips on how you can maintain your weight and diet accordingly.

People usually do not work very hard in their sixties and therefore need less energy, but just enough to perform daily chores. Your diet must contain adequate amount of protein, calcium, carbohydrates and vitamins. Eat different varieties of food everyday, so that it does not get monotonous and you have different taste everyday. As you grow old, your bones tend to become weak and feeble. Your calcium level decreases and you are likely to suffer from osteoporosis. To avoid these sufferings, you should drink enough low-fat milk and eat fat free dairy products like cheese and butter. Make sure you do not gain fat.

Fruits and vegetables are a very important source of nutrition for persons of this age group, as they provide a sufficient amount of vitamins and minerals. Most fruits contain vitamins B and C. Vitamins and calcium prevent memory loss, and shivering. Protein in your diet must only be about 15-18%, and mostly got from non-vegetarian foods like fish, eggs, and meat.

Always keep your body hydrated with water and juices. Water helps in cleansing the body from its impurities. Eat fibre rich food like vegetables that provide proteins, too. More of fiber in the body means less of toxins. Fibre can be found in pulses and baked beans, prunes and apricots. Do not eat a lot of sweet or sugar based food because the empty calories present in them do not exactly provide energy, but increases weight. Consumption of excess salt may raise high blood pressure, therefore, control intakes of salt and sugar.

Since senior people do not exactly engage themselves in physical activity, regular exercise and a proper diet is a must. One has to increase metabolism rate, in order to remain fit and not put on excess weight. Old people often eat very less and cannot have three big meals. They must have small meals after regular intervals, which helps to increase their metabolism rate. Do not take any protein supplements or fats loss pills because they need vigorous workouts and are basically meant for people below 60.

Avoid canned or packed food items, as they contain preservatives, which are not healthy for persons of that age group. Some packaged food also contains hydrogenated fats that may cause a problem in your cardio-vascular system. Eat controlled amounts of food, but ensure they are nutrient rich, so that you live a long, healthy life.

Healthy Eating For Infants

As a parent, you must take a number of precautions about your infant's diet. The best food for an infant is mother's milk. Normally, an infant is considered as baby of age 0 – 1 year old. People even consider preschoolers as infants. Let us categorize infants in different age groups and discuss their diet and precautions taken.

0-4 months: From the day of birth until the infant is 4 months, there is no better food for the child than the mother's milk. Mother's milk contains all the essentials that a child needs in balanced amounts. The temperature, thinness of milk, germ fighting and immunity enhancers, and many other factors ideal for the infant are present in mother's milk. At this time, an infant is not ready to digest solid or semi-solid foods; therefore, continue breast-feeding until 4-5 months. Even if the baby gets diarrhea, continue breast-feeding. It is best to continue breast-feeding the child up to the age of one year, but in this age, it is not possible.

5-6 months: You can now introduce your child to semi-solid food. At this age, the baby is not completely ready to ingest semi-solid food, but is partially all right. Try to feed the baby with cereals like wheat, maize or mashed fruits like apples. Make sure you dilute the food with either mother's milk or water. Feed the infant porridges. Feed the infant small amounts to a time, until it no longer is hungry. Do not force feed your infant, as it might initially not eat and might throw up. This happens because the infant is used only to sucking. The infant's food intake will gradually increase. Do not stop breast-feeding.

When your infant opens his/her mouth while feeding or the eyes follow the spoon means, your baby is now ready to taste and eat new food. Always feed your baby on your lap, this gives them the feeling of security.

7-9 months: After the baby gives positive response to the semi-solid food, you can now bring in mild solid food. Extremely small and fine pieces of fruits and vegetables, soft cheese, thin pieces of chicken should be the child's meal. Initially the child might not be very happy biting the food and might not eat. Therefore it is advised not to stop breast-feeding. If your baby is hungry every 2-4 hours and wets the diapers 4-6 times a day, it means, your baby is getting food and fluids in right quantity. Other indication could be baby's weight increase.

10-12 months: The food in this period is not so different, but a little variation in the food is required. Bigger chopped piece of meat, fish, vegetables and fruits could be given. Cereals, mother's milk and fruit juices diluted with water are recommended as liquids.

Always introduce new foods after every 2 weeks. This helps you spot the food types that cause allergies or illness to your child. Maintain a high level of hygiene. Always boil water; always feed lukewarm food.
